

1976 Chevy Nova

Before I get to the car a lot of you remember and have been asking about, the old Buick Skylark, I want to write a short bit about a car I owned for a short time. This one was the venerable 1976 Chevy Nova that I bought off Corey's brother for a few hundred dollars. One could simultaneously pour oil into the 4.1L inline six cylinder and watch it exit through the rear main seal onto the ground. No matter. This thing would definitely run without oil or coolant.

One could also simultaneously drive and watch the road pass by beneath the pedals due to the absence of floor boards in the front. Josh and Brooke will likely remember the time we hydroplaned on King Road on the way to school one cold, damp morning. This resulted in jets of freezing water erupting from the floors, causing what I can only describe as an 'inside car wash'. I think I sold it to my cousin, Kenny.
